PGCE ICT – Library Task

1) This is an article that details an investigation into the possibility that students’ context-generating cognitive processes can be stimulated by questions that are based on a model of context-generating processes, engaging the student to a newer depth of thinking. The study used a web-based environment to assess two groups of students.

2) This chapter reference comes from the book ‘The Teaching Assistants Guide’ and details some techniques and strategies which are applicable to any education professional entering the classroom. These strategies encourage and support appropriate and positive behaviour in schools. Ideas, task lists and discussion points make the chapter a valuable resource when learning more about behavioural management techniques.
